[CDFI STORY & ECONOMIC IMPACT TEXT]:2015 was a landmark year for Citizen Potawatomi Community Development Corporation (CPCDC). CPCDC leaders raised $21.3 million, exceeding all fundraising over the previous 12 years combined. A $16 million bond through the United States Treasury Department’s CDFI Bond Guarantee Program provided a record-setting boost in lending capital, giving the CPCDC a powerful tool to support the Tribal economy. CPCDC will deploy the bond funds through loans to support local Citizen Potawatomi Nation (CPN) Tribal projects, including Tribal enterprises.

Recent examples of CPCDC lending projects that have had an important impact include a loan to the local tribally owned grocery store to replace the refrigeration system. CPCDC also provided a construction loan to support the development of a new event center, which will bring sporting, concert and special event attendees from across the region to the Tribe’s headquarters. These loans allow CPCDC to leverage its own funds to support needed local projects while simultaneously expanding the organization’s ability to fund future projects through increased program revenue.

Through this lending activity, CPCDC is also supporting the ability of local Tribal members to retain jobs and spend their earned dollars in the local economy.

[Eye-catching closing sentence]: The partnership between CPCDC and the Tribe helped fuel $146 million in economic impact growth from 2008 to 2014.
